Protecting Indoor Air Quality in NJ Schools Amid Environmental Hazards

The recent wildfires across the state of New Jersey, especially in Ocean County, are stark reminders of how outdoor environmental events can directly impact indoor air quality (IAQ). In order to preserve IAQ in district buildings, it is crucial to implement strategies that address ventilation, filtration and source control, while following established guidelines and regulations. Proactive IAQ measures are critical not only during emergencies like wildfires but year-round, to support student health, reduce illness-related absences, and enhance overall school safety.

In New Jersey, the Public Employees Occupational Safety and Health (PEOSH) Program enforces specific IAQ standards for school buildings. These standards help schools maintain safe, breathable indoor environments by requiring proper HVAC maintenance, timely response to complaints and responsible construction practices. View the full PEOSH IAQ Standard.

IAQ Checklist for NJ Schools:

- Investigate and address IAQ complaints promptly
- Maintain HVAC systems per manufacturer and industry guidelines
- Replace air filters regularly with appropriate MERV ratings
- Create a preventive maintenance plan
- Control dust and fumes during construction and renovations
- Keep detailed records of IAQ maintenance and complaint resolutions
